EnviroGuard Launches Online Training Courses for Mission Critical Sites

MONTCLAIR, Calif. – October 26, 2011 - EnviroGuard, a leader in environmental, health and safety compliance, is taking safety to the next level with online training courses for all personnel responsible for mission critical data center engineering, commissioning, servicing, and property and facility management.

Launching this November at the 7x24 Exchange conference, more than 50 training courses provide installers, contractors, safety officers and facility personnel with OSHA approved materials and the environmental health and safety knowledge to properly manage data centers.

Courses are broken down into six categories and custom training professionals help businesses design tailored e-learning training packages to best meet a company's individual needs. These training categories include construction safety, battery room compliance, industrial and motive power, electrical safety, hazardous material management, and general OSHA training courses including emergency planning, office ergonomics, workplace first aid and much more.

Reducing operating costs through a risk management approach, these training courses are available online at EnviroGuardTraining.com and are available in multiple languages to meet global business requirements. Designed to maintain compliance and provide convenient, self-paced webinar and on-site training, the EnviroGuard training system allows users to print their certificate of completion directly, earn continuing education points and provides weekly reports.

Protecting facilities and personnel since 1993, EnviroGuard provides site assessments and critical training documentation through its nationwide network of partners in all major metropolitan areas in the US, Canada and China.
